

“Chat and Chew” on Careers

News Anchor

News anchors are the individuals you see on the television who explain the events of the day’s news. They are usually the host of the newscast.

A news anchor may work in the studio, however sometimes they also go on location to report stories. An anchor must be prepared to be an early riser or be a night owl.

While not all news anchors have backgrounds in journalism, a journalism education can get you in this career field faster. Some anchors study communications, English or drama.
